Review of Fixed Route bus Schedule Proposal 2

The Transit Schedule Improvement FY2013 of the 2030 Guam Transportation Plan projected general purpose fixed route service that connects major population and employment centers in the north, which has the most populous residential district, and Apra Harbor in the south, a major location of jobs.

Recommended fixed routes included connection between UOG and Micro Mall, a central island route and others. There was no projection for new fixed Southern routes other than improving connections between Apra/Tumon. The Plan identified expansion of semi-scheduled demand response service in the South and the North to nearest fixed routes. At the time of planning, demand response service was in operation. It was later cut due to budgetary considerations.

For all lines, including proposed lines of service:

1. Is scheduling of recovery time reflected? It is not shown at the end of each run. Recovery time permits the driver a break for food or restroom needs and allows the vehicle to fit properly into the next return trip outlined in the timetable, even if it arrives late. Planning for recovery time accounts for real time variations. As per the Transportation Plan, recovery time should be approximately 10% of the time spent on travel.

Southern Shuttle Service

1. What was the identified need for fixed route shuttle service in the South?
2. Based on the trial runs, what is the on-time performance?
3. Based on the trial runs, what are the hourly usage patterns?
4. Based on the trial runs, how many passengers connected to the main hub in Hagatna, therefore paying a fare. Overall %?
5. How will driver breaks be managed? Very few have down time at the end of each run. Will change of drivers occur on the street?
6. How is fueling impacted with regard to the new schedules?
7. Shuttles and fare collection. Will transfer tickets for same zone be provided? If not, how is fare managed?
8. Ipan Shuttle
    a. The Village of Talofofo lost its early morning connection to central Hagatna. How many people are affected? Is employment opportunity impacted vs the old schedule?
    b. The following runs are local runs, without good connection to service heading into Hagatna: Run 1, 2, 3, 6, 7, 10, 11. These should be viewed as local runs and need a passenger count with cost per passenger ride.
9. Inarajan Shuttle
    a. The following runs are local runs, without good connection to service heading into Hagatna: Run 2,3,6, 7, 10, 11 and 14. These need a passenger count and cost per passenger.
10. Agat Shuttle

a. AM service: First Agat Shuttle misses connection north to Hagatna.
b. AM service: The following runs are local runs, without good connection to service heading to Hagatna: Run 1, 2, and 5.
c. PM service: Afternoon peak hour service with shuttle has varying headway around 30 min for 9th and 10th run. Is this based on passenger demand? Does the duplication serve a passenger load need?

11. Merizo Shuttle
    a. AM service: Early morning hour service with shuttle has varying headway around 30 min for all runs and most of the service (runs 1, 2 and 5) is local without good connection to points north. Is this based on passenger demand and serve a passenger load need?

North Greyline 2 and Orange line connection

1. For both lines, what is the on-time performance?
2. The schedule for Greyline 2 provides the northern urban area with improved headways and seems to connect well to Tumon for employees. How do the numbers look?
3. Orange line seems to be a good connection. What are the passenger numbers per run for Orange line?
4. Break time for drivers does not appear to be planned (see item #1). How will the transfer of drivers be accomplished between shifts.
5. Is fueling vehicles during the day an issue? If so, what is the plan for managing?

Sudden breakup is hard to handle

DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I was dating a woman for about two years, and recently, out of nowhere, she told me that she wanted to break up with me. I've been trying to get answers from her, but she hasn't been giving me straight ones. She keeps telling me that it wasn't my fault, but I still think it was. I want to get back with her, but she is now ignoring my texts. I guess my question is: Should I try to make things right and get back together, or should I move on and forget her? — Heartbroken

Dear Heartbroken: I'm so sorry you're hurting. Breakups are never easy, and it can be especially frustrating when you're not getting straight answers, because you feel that if you just knew why, you could either fix it or at least have closure. But the truth is that nothing she could say would give you real closure. The only thing that will give you that is time. Although I know it doesn't feel like it now, you'll be OK again one day in the not-so-distant future. Losing someone who doesn't want to be with you is actually a gain because you can make space for someone who does want to be with you.

Dear Annie: A friend and I are planning a high tea for a group of friends. We plan for it to be formal and have three courses. Would it be OK and proper to tell the ladies, in their invitations, that there is a charge? — Tea Party Planners

Dear Tea Party: Not only is it perfectly fine manners to let them know the cost in advance but it would be perfectly bad manners not to. Have a lovely teatime.

Dear Annie: This is in response to the letter from "In a Quandary in PA." She was ready to put her house up for sale and debating whether to try moving in with her boyfriend or to move closer to her daughter (who is an hour away). Her gentleman friend said he's content with his beer, pack of smokes and alone time. You advised her to give him an ultimatum about moving in together and to move closer to her daughter if she doesn't get the answer she's looking for.

If I were her, I would definitely skip the ultimatum and just move forward with putting the house up for sale. If she gave the ultimatum and he "caved," she could move in with him, but she would always have a nagging feeling that he only did it out of pressure and not because he really loved her and wanted to spend time with her. Plus, men respond poorly to ultimatums, and she could save herself the heartache of rejection by not trying that.

Once she puts her house up for sale, he may beg her not to leave and say he wants to live with her. In that case, she would know he's a keeper, and they could figure out their living arrangements. If he doesn't resist the move and instead just wishes her well, she'll know she made the right choice not to stick around for his sake. Please, no ultimatums! — Knows Better

Dear Knows: Another reader wrote in that if you have to make an ultimatum, you already have your answer. I feel that's true 90 percent of the time, but there are times when ultimatums organically arise and are warranted. I'd also like to add that they should be made only when you really mean them and intend to follow through. Empty ultimatums stink of desperation.
